

AUSTRALIAN INSTITUTE OF
Social and Ethical Accountability

As the number of organisations in Australia choosing to account for their social, environmental and economic performance grows, there are precious few places where the wide range of practitioners and stakeholders can debate, critique, share ideas, and just talk about the experiences, including the benefits and challenges.

The Australian Institute of Social and Ethical Accountability presents the Practitioners Talk Series as a forum to address this need. Each Talk features a range of panellists who lead the discussion by telling their stories. Significant time is set aside to allow attendees to engage with the panellists.

Catherine Mahony, Deputy Director (Sector Development) of the New South Wales Council of Social Service (NCOSS)

Catherine has worked extensively as a researcher, policy analyst and industry development practitioner and gained her qualifications as a Social Auditor in Northern Ireland in 1999.

Catherine's interests include the potential of 'values based' social auditing to the community sector and sustainability and accountability frameworks across all industries. She recently completed a national needs analysis of rural and regional Australia using a 'capitals' framework.

Jo Taylor, General Manager, Streetwize Communications

Streetwize is the first national Australian not for profit organization to be successfully socially audited by an independent panel. The social accounting and audit process has enabled Streetwize to account for and report on its social performance as well as draw up a performance improvement action plan. Jo uses the social audit data in all areas of Streetwize work and believes that although the social accounting process is challenging it is crucial to the professional development and successful growth of the sector.

David Pigott, General Manager Corporate Partnerships, Mission Australia

David is responsible for managing and developing Mission Australia's key relationships with the corporate sector. David's focus has been to ensure that Mission Australia is a national leader in the development of 'best practice' business and community partnerships. Mission Australia are developing a national sustainability program based on CRI and have also used the Social Audit Network social accounting and auditing process in their services in Queensland.
